Cushing Vol. II

Club' on the 24th at Merton College as Sir Walter Raleigh's guest, which indicates that Osler, despite his emaciated body, was in good spirits; as does also this note of the next evening from the same diary:

Sir William says it 's a cold day when he does not add something to the library. Today he's been simply cavorting over an Assyrian medical tablet with cuneiform text, baked in clay. Lady O. said: 'Humph, it looks like a piece of Scotch short-cake', and it really does; but we took it over to S. H. Langdon, one-time Reader in Assyriology, more recently private in His Majesty's Army, who fairly ate it up, which sounds a little as though he too held Lady O.'s view. It comes from the temple library of Sennacherib and is of the period of Sardanapalus—one of the few medical tablets, apparently, to have been found at Assur—'the place where the widows howled' as W. O. recalls. It has an interesting provenance and much has happened in the world between the capture by Sennacherib of Jerusalem in 701 B.C. and by Allenby in A.D. 1918. On the outbreak of the war the Germans were excavating at Assur. A German with this tablet in his pocket was taken prisoner by the Arabs in whose possession the tablet was subsequently found at Mosul. It was sent from Assyria to Prof. Scheil of the Académie des Inscriptions by his brother; thence to W. O.
